Department of Imaging science and arts

GSAIM is a graduate school which includes majors of Arts (Film, Animation & Media Studies, Entertainment Content Planning/Policy/Business, Digital Scientific Photography, Film & Media Production, Immersive Media/Animation Contents and Special Effects), Imaging science(Digital Imaging, VR/Game/Metaverse and technology art), Creative Masters(Art/Engineering) and Entertainment Technology.

Major in Image Engineering

Digital Imaging (디지털 이미징)

We study 3D imaging, artificial intelligence-based digital image processing and recognition technology, and augmented reality technology, which are technologies for digital content development. Based on these studies in the field of advanced digital imaging technology, various application technologies such as synthesis with the real world and virtual world, active understanding of the real world, interpretation of robots and self-driving visual systems, artificial intelligence models for video and content, and 3D virtual environment are being developed.

VR/Game/Metaverse (VR/게임/메타버스)

Through research on 2D and 3D images, modeling and rendering, and animation, we intend to develop new expression technologies and environments and foster competitive human resources to develop future applications. This enables virtual environments/synthetic environments that are difficult to actually work or practice in various fields by using simulations in artificial environments implemented using computers and peripherals. In addition, it studies the production and utilization of intelligent and efficient game content by applying improved interactive technology. It enables active and effective implementation of information, entertainment, and art elements of content through research such as improved production environment of multimedia and game content, intelligent response of content, efficient utilization through network, watermarking to protect content, and information protection technology. In particular, the convergence of video games, computer graphics, 3D/AR/VR, interactive technology, visual perception science, and artificial intelligence technologies enables the implementation of metabuses that can finally freely interact with the real world and virtual world.

○ Technology Art (예술공학)

Technology Art major aims at creation and application of contents using digital media. Philosophy and literature in the digital era to produce new discourses and outcomes (works for exhibition and performances, and environmental sculptures) in the era of digital media. Students will study interactive media art and application technologies based on digital media. Researches and implements art works, media facade, projection mapping, 4D performance, digital entertainment, 3D image system using characteristics and merits of digital image technology and creates high-tech media objects such as kinetic medium object. In addition, we will test the possibilities of utilizing all digital media by planning and producing master plan of digital environment artworks.

□ MAJOR IN Film / Multimedia

○ Film, Animation & Media Studies (영화영상이론)

The Film, Animation & Media Studies major provides an in-depth level of graduate education in the context of art and humanities. The major, which theoretically studies all forms of video culture, including movies, animation, television and digital media, deals with Korean films, film history, film theory and criticism, animation research, technology aesthetics, media culture, experimental movies and videos, documentaries, post-cinema research, and modern Asian films.

○ Entertainment Content Planning/Policy/Business (콘텐츠기획/정책/비즈니스)

Based on professional knowledge of video, it aims to cultivate professionals in planning, management, and policy related to the video content industry (movie, drama, webtoon, animation, game, etc.). In order to cultivate creative talents with knowledge of culture and arts and an understanding of the video industry, it focuses on learning video theory and practical expertise through organic connection with the field.

○ Film & Media Production (영화영상제작)

The entire process of film production, including planning, pre-production, production, and post-production, will be repeated and deepened through film production workshops, advanced production workshops, and graduation production, and theoretical knowledge required in the production process. In addition, it is mandatory to reinforce the basic knowledge of movies by preparing an undergraduate athlete course separately from the graduate curriculum for non-movie majors. Through such a dense process, students can expect a high-quality portfolio at graduation by securing results such as film production support and film festival entry.

○ Special Effects (영상특수효과)

The rapid development of digital and computer technologies requires not only the research/development of special effects-related technologies but also the training of artists who can understand and sublimate them to artistic values. Therefore, the major in video special effect production focuses on understanding the technical field of video and training creative video art personnel who can fully utilize it for creating works.

○ Digital / Scientific Photography (디지털 / 과학사진)

It challenges the infinite applicability of orthogonics based on the theories and practices of scientific and digital photography, which have been used to evaluate, analyze, and measure objects that have exceeded human limitations or are difficult to record in general photographic technology. In particular, the scope of research is expanded to everywhere where the role of the image is required by boldly surpassing the part that has been thought to be the unique area of photography so far. Basically, classes are conducted centering on projects linked to industry and academia, dealing with not only regular photographs but also special video ranges such as 3D, high-speed, medical, and criminal images

○ Immersive Media/Animation Contents (실감미디어/애니메이션콘텐츠)

In addition to producing traditional animations such as 2D and stop motion, it focuses on CG-based 3D animation production and realistic media content production such as AR and VR, and consists of a curriculum on planning/directing/production techniques. It also researches and develops creative forms of content that harmonize art and technology in connection with digital imaging/artificial intelligence technology.

□ MAJOR Entertainment Technology.

○ Entertainment Technology (엔터테인먼트 테크놀로지)

Based on the balance between engineering and art, the entertainment technology major aims to cultivate entertainment-related experts who will change our daily lives as new cultural technologies and contents. It aims to foster talented people who can simultaneously pursue practicality, professionalism, creativity and artistry through all graduate courses and actively solve problems in related fields. It not only deals with the latest research topics such as interactive entertainment content-based digital human, realistic content and artificial intelligence application technology development, but also aims to conduct diverse convergence research across culture, art and technology.
